How to Conjugate Reflexive Verbs in Spanish

Reflexive verbs are verbs that describe an action that the subject performs on itself. For example, if you are doing something yourself (i.e., bathing yourself), you'll want to use the reflexive form of the conjugated Spanish verb in addition to the subject and pronoun. This can sound a bit tricky, but once you break it down, it becomes easier. The first step is understanding the Spanish reflexive pronouns associated with each subject, which are as follows.

Subject and Reflexive Pronoun	English Equivalent
Yo me...	I... myself
Tu te...	You (informal)... yourself
Usted se...	You (formal)... yourself
Él / Ella se...	He / She... himself / herself
Nosotros / Nosotras nos...	We (masculine / feminine)... ourselves
Vosotros / Vosotras os...	You (informal, masculine / feminine)... yourselves
Ustedes se...	You (formal, plural)... yourselves
Ellos / Ellas se...	They (masculine / feminine)... themselves

When conjugating reflexive verbs in Spanish, the primary thing to remember is the subject and the reflexive pronoun. The verb will be conjugated based on the regular present rules we reviewed at the beginning of the article.

Then, you'll want to learn where to place the pronouns. In most cases, the reflexive Spanish pronoun will be put before the Spanish conjugated verb. You can see this reflected in a few examples below.

- Se cepilló el pelo antes de irse a la cama. (She brushed her hair before going to bed).
- Se hizo daño jugando al fútbol. (He hurt himself while playing football)
- Ayer nos divertimos en la playa. (Yesterday we had fun at the beach).
